

There Have Been Hundreds Of Thousands Of CtC-Educated Victories For The Rule Of Law

SOME MAY BE SHOCKED AT THE REVELATION THAT tens of thousands of Americans have been standing up to do the right thing for years now, and winning hundreds of thousands of victories for the rule of law. But however much revenue- and power-hungry governments may prefer that you not know anything about it, this IS how it is.

Look at the following admissions forced out of the feds in court in 2009. Start with this stipulation:

14 THE COURT: Certainly.
15 I'll just remind the jurors of the
16 instruction I've given you on stipulated facts being
17 evidence.
18 MR. LANE: Thank you, Your Honor.
19 It is stipulated between the parties that
20 numerous individuals have filed returns
21 similar to Mr. Hendrickson's and have
22 received refunds from the Internal Revenue
23 Service.

Here is the sworn testimony of a Senior Technical Advisor in just one of the many offices of the IRS, telling us what the expression "numerous" really means:

9 Q Since 2005, how many have you seen?
10 A How many total returns?
11 Q Of similar to Mr. Hendrickson's.
12 A I'm going to say conservatively, at least
13 10,000.

Now, filings by Americans educated through reading Cracking the Code- The fascinating Truth About Taxation In America \(CtC\) have been being processed through at least eight different IRS offices all over the country since 2003. You can see the ID's of each by looking at the face of any given refund check or notice, which bears the office designation of "Andover", "Fresno", "Ogden", "San Francisco", "Philadelphia", and so on.

So, let's do the math:

A senior staffer reports that her one office alone handled, conservatively, at least 10,000 educated returns between (what she elsewhere said was the end of) 2005 until October, 2009, when she made this testimony. That's "conservatively, at least 10,000" during a four year period (and one beginning when CtC had only been in print for two years, and very few copies were out there).

Eight offices handling claims at that rate would mean, "conservatively, at least," 80,000 educated filings just during that four year period. There have been, at time of this writing in August of 2015, three such four-year periods since CtC went into print.

Projecting even cautiously, this would suggest a minimum total of 200,000 (and probably many more than that).

And that's just the feds. CtC-educated claims are also processed through 34 different state tax agencies, as well (and additional smaller tax units, as well).

So, to get a proper notion of how many we're talking about, look at this little gathering:

NOW LET'S LOOK AT THE OTHER SIDE of this story.

At the time of this writing (again, August, 2014) there are about 1,100 examples of these CtC-educated claims and the good consequences they produced posted for examination (along with the filings themselves, in many cases). Those 1,100 or so examples add up, in amounts recovered or retained by their proper owners, to a total of $11,852,726.98-- an average per victory of approximately $10,775 (and every one issued only after rigorous vetting).

So, again, let's do the math:

200,000 refunds x $10,775= $2,155,000,000. That's $2.15 billion-with-a-"b".

In fact, in April, 2015, a DOJ Tax Division attorney admitted that CtC-educated claimants had recovered or retained billions, calling the book's revelations something to which the IRS is "seemingly vulnerable". He called those revelations a "scheme", but I'm sure he hoped the spill-out crowd in the courtroom that day wouldn't realize that the only "scheme" to which the IRS could be "vulnerable" is the one imposed upon it by the law...

ALL IN ALL, IT MAY WELL BE THAT the vast practical evidence of the liberating truth about the income tax that the CtC community of dedicated American grown-ups has been pulling from the teeth of dozens of junk-yard-dog tax agencies since 2003 is the most effectively suppressed secret of the 21st Century. It's certainly the most important.
